EXPLANATION OF SUBJECT INDEX FOR REPORTS OF LEGISLATIVE INTERIM, LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL, AND SPECIAL LEGISLATIVE COMMITTEES

Reports of legislative interim, legislative council, and special legislative committees can be useful sources of information for current legislative interim reports, special legislative committee reports, or for general research purposes. To facilitate access to these reports, the Legislative Research Department has compiled this subject index for those publications for years 1934 (the first year for which special legislative reports exist) through 2017.

A report may be referenced in more than one subject area, reflecting the overlapping of subject matters within reports. A table of contents showing the list of subjects, and more specific topics in some instances, precedes the full index. (Note: When a new compilation of this publication is published, editors do not edit any content from prior publications and only add to the compilation.)

Within the index, the year following the title indicates the year the report was published. Proposal numbers are listed when such numbers were assigned. The notation "See Council Journal," following the title of a committee report, refers to the Legislative Council Journals, which can be found in the Legislative Research Department or in the State Library, both located in the Statehouse. (These reports, dated prior to 1971, were prepared before the formation of the current Legislative Coordinating Council.) Some reports were published separately or in a supplement to the final report of interim committees, and some were published in the Senate or House Journals rather than being published in a separate volume. Senate or House Journals can also be found in the Legislative Research Department and the State Library. The index also lists a report's page number within its referenced publication.

Several special reports prepared by Legislative Research Department staff have been included in this index. These reports were not printed in the compilations of reports of legislative interim, legislative council, and special legislative committees.

The subject index does not include numbered Research Department publications, but these publications can be found on the archives list of Legislative Research Department publications. That list is available in the Legislative Research Department.
